CAI offers services, designed to help Christian entrepreneurs improve their chances of funding their startup or early-phase businesses. These services are explained in more detail below. Further descriptions, of CAI services, are also provided through the Site and are made a part of this Agreement by reference.

- a. The Free Membership Plan. This is a free subscription that occurs when you complete the new Member profile on the Site. This membership allows you to submit your business plan, executive summary and other corporate documents for review, as to viability and funding possibilities. There is no cost for this review.

CAI also provides fee-based services. These services include: consulting, business plan writing, business model validation, creation of investor information packages and SEC compliances documents, such as a Private Placement Memorandum PPM). A PPM is comprised of the following:

Introduction: The first pages outline the basic terms of the offering including a brief statement about the company, its core business, and all "legends" required by federal and state laws.

Summary of Offering Terms: This section is usually in the form of a term sheet and should include the capitalization of the company – both before and after the offering. Other terms that may be included are liquidation preferences, conversion rights, anti-dilution provisions, voting rights, and any other protective provisions for the investors.

Risk Factors: A PPM will include risk factors conceivable by the issuer that may impact the investor's investment, including general risks common to similar investments and those risks unique to the issuer and its securities. For example, risks may include the dependence on a strategic partnership, dependence on a small number of personnel, or risks from competition.

Description of the Company and the Management: This section gives the company's history and describes products and services, performance history, the industry, goals, competition, advertising and marketing strategy, suppliers, intellectual property, customer descriptions, and any other material information that would be relevant to the investor. Management information will include biographical information, special skills, and other background information.

Use of Proceeds: A company must describe how it will use the net proceeds raised in connection with the offering and the approximate amount intended to be used for each purpose. This allows the investor to know how the money they and others are investing will be used.

Description of Securities: This section describes the rights, restrictions, and class of securities being offered. It should also describe the ability of the company to change its capitalization such as different classes of shares and distribution of dividends.

Subscription Procedures: This section describes the instructions for investing in the offering.

Exhibits: Exhibits allow a company to provide supplemental information and documents that may be material to an investor's investment decision. The exhibits may include copies of investment contracts, financial statements, the organizational documents of the issuer, key contracts, licenses, and so on.
